Overview

On 1 December 1998, Australia became a party to the Hague Convention on the Protection of Children and Cooperation in respect of Intercountry Adoption (the Hague Convention). The Hague Convention establishes principles to ensure that intercountry adoptions occur only where it is in the best interest of the child and with respect for his or her fundamental rights.

Australia has intercountry adoption programs with a number of countries. These programs are either conducted under the Hague Convention or through bilateral arrangements. In Australia, intercountry adoption must be undertaken through State and Territory Central Authorities (that is, the state or territory government child welfare authority). These authorities manage arrangements for adopting children from overseas, including assessing and approving prospective adoptive parents.

The Australian Government, through the Department of Social Services (DSS), has the responsibility for managing existing programs and negotiating new programs with other countries. The list of countries is subject to change. Please visit the Intercountry Adoption Australia website for an up to date list of Australia's intercountry adoption programs at www.intercountryadoption.gov.au

For the purposes of Australian citizenship and migration law, a full Hague Convention adoption takes place only if a valid Adoption Compliance Certificate (ACC) in accordance with Article 23 of the Hague Convention has been issued and that ACC has been accepted by the relevant Central Authority. Therefore, not every adoption undertaken within a country that is a party to the Hague Convention is a full Hague Convention adoption. If an adoption is not a full Hague Convention adoption, further legal recognition of the adoption may be required following the adopted child's entry to Australia.

Australia has bilateral adoption arrangements with 3 countries, prescribed in Schedule 1 of the Bilateral Arrangements Regulations. Only 2 of these countries have operational intercountry adoption programs with Australia – Taiwan and the Republic of Korea. Children adopted through these programs are eligible to use this form to apply for Australian citizenship after finalisation of the adoption in Taiwan or the Republic of Korea. The program with the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia was closed in 2012. Children adopted under this program prior to its closure are eligible to apply for Australian citizenship using this form.

Step 1 – Eligibility

You may be eligible to apply for citizenship using form 1272 if you were adopted by Australian citizen parent(s) and:

- the adoption was organised through an Australian State and Territory Central Authority (Hague Convention countries) or intercountry adoption authority (bilateral arrangement countries) under one of Australia's intercountry adoption programs, and

- a valid Adoption Compliance Certificate has been issued by the relevant Central Authority in the country in which the child was adopted, and
- the adoption is recognised in Australia under the laws of the Commonwealth and each state and territory.

You may also be eligible to apply for citizenship using form 1272 if you were adopted by Australian citizen parent(s) and:

- the adoption was organised between the relevant Central Authorities in 2 countries that are party to the Hague Convention other than Australia, and
- a valid Adoption Compliance Certificate has been issued by the relevant Central Authority in the country in which the child was adopted, and
- the receiving Hague Convention country recognises the adoption as a full Hague Convention adoption so no further legal recognition of the adoption is required in that country.

If you apply for citizenship for your child using form 1272 while you are outside Australia, you do not need to first apply for a visa for your child. However, if you return to Australia prior to applying for citizenship for your child, you will need to apply for a visa for the child to be able to enter Australia.

Citizenship commences on the date the application is approved. You do not need to attend a citizenship ceremony.

Note:

- An Adoption Compliance Certificate must comply with Article 23 of the Hague Convention. We recommend that before submitting an application using form 1272, you review the information on the Department's website <http://www.homeaffairs.gov.au/citizenship> or contact the Citizenship Information line on 131 880 to confirm whether the documentation provided is a valid Adoption Compliance Certificate for the purposes of an application for Australian citizenship. If the incorrect form is used, the application will be refused and the application fee will not be refunded.
- For a number of reasons to do with documentation, not all Hague Convention countries provide Adoption Compliance Certificates that meet Article 23 requirements. Bilateral arrangement adoptions must be made with a country that is prescribed in Schedule 1 of the Bilateral Arrangements Regulations (the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia, the Republic of Korea, and Taiwan). Where an Adoption Compliance Certificate does not meet requirements or a bilateral arrangement country has not been prescribed, the child will not be eligible to apply for citizenship using form 1272. The child will need to apply for and be granted a permanent resident visa, and enter Australia on that visa, before they will be eligible to apply for Australian citizenship using form 1290 Application for Australian citizenship – Other situations.
- Some of Australia's intercountry adoption programs require the adoption to be completed in Australia after the child enters Australia. As part of the adoption process, the child will have entered Australia on an Adoption (subclass 102) visa. The child will automatically acquire Australian citizenship on the day the adoption order is made by the Australian court.
- For adoptions made under other arrangements (such as private or expatriate adoptions) – your child will need to apply for, and be granted, an Adoption (subclass 102) visa in order to enter Australia. Once your child has entered Australia on that visa, they may then be eligible to apply for citizenship using form 1290 Application for Australian citizenship – Other situations.

Children

Applications for children under 16 years of age must be made by a responsible parent.

The Australian Citizenship Act 2007 defines responsible parent in relation to a child as:

- a parent, unless that parent does not have parental responsibility because of orders made by the Family Court of Australia, or
- any person having responsibility over the child because of an order made by the Family Court, or
- any person who has guardianship or custody of the child under an Australian law or a foreign law, whether because of adoption, operation of law, an order of a court or otherwise.

Step 2 – Original documents

You will need to provide the Department with a range of documents to prove that you are who you say you are and to establish you have not had any serious criminal convictions. These documents are called identity documents and good character documents.

You will also need to provide additional documents regarding your adoption. These are called supporting documents and include an Adoption Compliance Certificate. Depending whether the adoption is a Hague Convention or bilateral arrangement adoption, an Adoption Compliance Certificate may comprise of more than one document. For a Hague Convention adoption, the Adoption Compliance Certificate is issued by the country's central authority and names the receiving country's central authority. For a bilateral arrangement adoption from a prescribed country (the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia, the Republic of Korea, and Taiwan) an Adoption Compliance Certificate is issued by that country's intercountry adoption authority and may include the court adoption order or a letter from a government Department.

If you have to get documents from overseas, this can take time. You will not be able to complete the application process without these documents.

Translations and certified copies

If your documents are not in English, you must provide official translations. In Australia, you must use translators accredited by the National Accreditation Authority of Translators and Interpreters. For more information, see www.naati.com.au

Unless specified that original documents are required, certified copies of original documents must be attached to your application. These copies must be certified by a person with the correct authority. See Identity declarations – list of professions on page 6 for people who can certify documents. Further information on certifying documents is available on the Department's website

<https://immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/applying-online-or-on-paper/on-paper/certified-copy>

If you are outside Australia when applying, contact the Australian Home Affairs office in the country where the documents were issued for advice on acceptable translators, and who can certify your original documents.

If you need to provide overseas penal clearance certificates with your application, you must provide certified copies of the certificates.

Identity declaration

The identity declaration must be completed and signed by an Australian citizen who:

- has known you for at least one year and belongs to a profession on the list on page 6, and
- is not related to you by birth, marriage or de facto relationship, and
- is easy to contact by telephone during normal working hours.

The person who signs the declaration must also write on the back of your photograph the words: This is a true photograph of (your full name) and sign the back of the photograph using the same signature as on the declaration.

The photograph should be carefully attached to the front of the application form without obscuring the image, or you can place the photograph in a plastic sleeve or envelope and staple it to the form.

The photograph must be:

- no more than 6 months old
- a full-face view of your head and shoulders (untinted prescription glasses can be worn – a photograph that shows facial features only is acceptable if you wear a head covering for religious reasons)

Note: If you are outside Australia when applying you can have the identity declaration completed by a citizen of your country of residence who has known you for at least one year and belongs to a profession on the list on page 6.

Children

The same conditions (see above) apply to the Australian citizen who signs the child's identity declaration and photograph, except in the case of children under 6 years of age. If no Australian citizen has known them for at least one year, the declaration can be signed by a person who belongs to a profession on the list on page 6 who has known the child for less than one year.

Good character

If you are 18 years of age or over, the Department will request a Nationally Coordinated Criminal History Check (NCCHC) from the National Police Checking Service (NPCS).

You must tell the Department about any convictions you may have had in Australia or overseas. A conviction is a criminal charge leading to a guilty verdict in a court of law resulting in imprisonment, a fine or good behaviour bond. A traffic infringement, such as an on-the-spot speeding or parking fine, is not considered a conviction.

Spent convictions

You must declare spent convictions in your application.

The spent convictions law allows people with minor convictions to disregard those convictions after a certain period of time. A conviction may be considered spent if:

- it is 10 years since the date of the conviction (or 5 years for juvenile offenders), and
- the person was not sentenced to imprisonment for more than 30 months, and
- the person has not re-offended during the 10 year period (or 5 years for juveniles), and
- a statutory or prescribed exclusion does not apply.

The Department is allowed to ask you for this information for the purpose of assessing your application. Please refer to and read the information regarding spent convictions at <https://immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/meeting-our-requirements/character/character-requirements-for-australian-citizenship>

Overseas penal clearance certificates

Overseas penal clearance certificates, or police checks as they are known in some countries, show whether a person has a criminal record.

You may need to provide an overseas penal clearance certificate as part of your documentation if you are 18 years of age or over.

When to provide overseas penal clearance certificates

Penal clearance certificates from overseas countries are required if, in the last 10 years:

- you lived or travelled outside Australia and were aged 18 years or over, and
- the total time spent outside Australia added up to 12 months or more, and
- the time spent in any one country was more than 90 days, or
- if requested by the Department.

You will need to provide certified copies of all overseas penal clearance certificates from each country where you spent more than 90 days.

Information about where to obtain an overseas penal clearance certificate by country can be obtained from the Department's website.
